Bonn Chief, JFK Begin Strategy Sessions Today

German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer reached Washington Sunday night for talks aimed at unifying the Western Allies' position preparatory to negotiations with the Russ ans on West Berlin and othe: points of conflict.

Monday the octogenarian German begins a three-day series of meetings with President Kennedy - sessions in which the two leaders will strive for a united front, perhaps at the price of some concessions on each side.

Adenauer's direct flight from Bonn ended at 5:35 p.m. (EST) at nearby Andrews Air Force Base where the 85-year-old chancellor was greeted by Secretary of State Dean Rusk.

Speaking briefly and extemporaneously at the planeside, Adenauer expressed confidence that the peace-loving Western nations ultimately will win the long struggle against communism. Then he said his visit comes "at a very difficult time when all nations of good will must cooperate."

"Dean Of Western World"

Rusk hailed Adenauer as "dean of the Western world whose judgment is a great asset to the entire Western world.

It means at least a five-day breathing spell for this little nation-struggling to maintain neutrality in East-West affairs-in the Kremlin's campaign for joint defense talks pegged to an alleged threat of West German aggression in the Baltic.

Khrushchev On Tour

Khrushchev is on a tour of industrial centers and farm lands in eastern reaches of the Soviet Union, which could explain why he suggested Novosibirsk as the site. That city of more than 750,-000, sometimes called the Chicago of Siberia, is on the Ob River, 1,750 miles east of Moscow.

VIDENTIFY YIDENTIFY YIDEN Avoid Teacher Pay Issue

EASTON, Md. (AP)-The conroversial question of teachers salaries was side-stepped Saturday by the executive board of the Maryland Junior Chamber of ommerce.

Defeated by a majority of the 6 voting members was a resoluion which would have put the group on record as favoring higher salaries for Maryland public school teachers. Some 200 members of the association attended the one-day meeting here.

The resolution was tabled after Robert L. Sidel, president of the Eastern Junior Chamber of Commerce, argued that the chamber should not "go on record as favoring or opposing a political issue such as this.

"I do not believe we should put purselves in a position to be used by any pressure group," Sidel

The proposed resolution urged passage of a higher state minimum salary scale for teachers. raising the existing scale of $3,600-$5,700 to $4,000-$7,000.

Approved by the board, however, was a resolution urging the legislature to make mandatory the inspection of automobiles registered in Maryland.

bout thirty years ago, automotive history was made when a newcomer, Plymouth, first challenged the giants of the industry—with an advertisement that said, "Look at all three."

Today, a similar situation, but in reverse, is making new history as the giants -Ford and Chevrolet-try to challenge another car.

Today, they have each produced a new car trying to challenge Rambler. The Rambler Classic, for over six years, has been America's only middle-for six 6-footers in full comfort. For over six years, Rambler has offered car buyers the best of both-big-car room and performance, with compact-size car—the only compact that has room

car economy and handling ease. The overwhelming acceptance of this car by the public has resulted in such a phenomenal success that Rambler now outsells all other cars but the two giants.

It was inevitable, of course, that these two giants would arrive at the Rambler Classic size sometime.

That time is now. Ford has announced its Fairlane, Chevrolet its Chevy II.

So now it is time for the astute car buyer again to "look at all three"-but this time, Chevrolet, Ford and Rambler. For 1962, Rambler offers two fine cars in the "best-of-both" size. The chart at the right compares them with the Ford and Chevrolet entries. Even a quick check shows that the Rambler Classic (or Ambassador V-8) offers far more advantages to the buyer than the other two cars.

This, too, is inevitable.

It costs millions and millions of dolars to convert production lines to building cars with unitized construction. Both these competitive cars have had to do that this year. Rambler did it years ago, so our costs have long since been written off—a major reason why we can add so many other features to our cars.

Even more than this-we realize that, as an independent automobile company competing in a market dominated by giants, we must offer an obviously better value in both product and price to exist and succeed. That we are doing so is evidenced by our sales growth.

We also know that our best insurance for success is to share our growth and progress with all who help produce it-our employees and our customers. Sharing progress with customers is the real key to success. Only by adding more and more improvements-adding more and more value-and making our cars more usable, more comfortable, more trouble-free, more economical to buy and to operate, can we grow.

When you realize that we have added 102 advancements to our 1962 models-and lowered prices on every one of them-you can understand why our sales keep soaring.

Many times I have predicted publicly that the Rambler Classic size eventually would be the new standard-size car in America-and that Ford and Chevrolet would lose their lead unless they produced cars of similar size.

Now they have done that, and you can look at all three: Rambler, Fairlane, and

When you do, I believe you will find Rambler an obviously better value in product and price.

Our 28 Years Of Dealing With Reds

Twenty-eight years ago this month Soviet Russia was recognized by the United States as one of the early major moves of the Roosevelt administration. The Wilson administration, and three Republican administrations, had withheld recognition. Recognition was made somewhat attractive because it was accompanied by a prediction it would result in billions in new trade.

Since then America's treatment of Russia has been more than fair and generous. Except for Russia's contribution to defeat of the Axis powers, after Moscow was double-crossed in trying to play along with them, this country has had nothing from Russia but subversion and

During the Thirties Russia infiltrated the U. S. and its government with spies and saboteurs. It made a deal with Hitler and gave him the go-ahead signal to start World War II.

After Hitler turned on Russia, everything was forgotten and forgiven by Uncle Sam and agreements were entered into with the Bolsheviks which were dependent entirely upon Russia's good faith.

Russia clubbed every area under its sway into Communist dictatorship, backed the Communist revolution in China, started the Korean War, aggravated troubles in all lands and turned its hand at every point against its

In the 28 years since Washington extended the hand of friendship to the Russian Communists, Moscow has betrayed America's good intentions at almost every turn. For news of the deviltry the Bolsheviks are currently up to, read the front page of any newspaper.

By George E. Sokolsky

Kennedy And Business

The Kennedy Administration is making itself clear that it is not anti-business. The first important statement to that effect was made in a speech by the Attorney General, Robert F. Kennedy, who, discussing anti-trust enforcement, stated that it was not the intention of the Administration to harass business.

The Eisenhower Administration, while it gave the Impression of being dominated by businessmen, conducted a strong anti-trust policy, going after some of the largest enterprises. The anti-trust policy of the Administration is not only related to the economic but also to social conditions in the country.

Three distinct problems need to be considered in relation to this situation:

1. The capitalist system can only continue to exist if competition is active. The suppression of competition by the formation of trusts is damaging to the capitalist system. The economic peril of trusts is that prices are fixed and monopolies come into existence. Attorney General Kennedy takes the position:

"... I view the businessman who engages in such conspiracies in the same light as I regard the racketeer who siphons off money from the public in crooked gambling, or the union official who betrays his union member.

2. The moral factor in this situation is that we adopt dual standard, forgiving the rich and important wrong-doer and punishing the poor and unimportant. After all, the businessman knows when he is organizing in restraint of competition. Certainly his lawyer knows all about it. While in certain instances, there may be differences of opinion, in most, the organization of a trust is deliberate; price-fixing is deliberate. Those who engage in such activities have held meetings and discussed various problems related to a combination in restraint of trade. Their lawyers have advised them of the tolerable and intolerable gimmicks. Their public relations counsel have cautioned them. Therefore, if the organization of trusts and if price-fixing is against the law, the moral imperative is to avoid such activities or to get the law changed.

Attorney General Kennedy says of this: "When possible, I believe we should take action not only against the corporations and companies involved, but against the individuals who have participated in

"I am against granting immunity to the individuals with the result that their cases end with their companies paying a fine. I think those responsible should be held responsible.

The third factor in this situation is the other side of the coin: big production cannot be handled by small enterprises. When, for instance, a company does a business of between $500,000,000 and $1,000,000,000 a year, the problems of capitalization and of managerial organization are different from those which involve a shop that does $10,000 a year. A company that employs 250,000 workers has labor problems that are different from a husband and wife store. Mergers often are essential to build an adequate agency of production. For instance, many electronic companies have recently come into existence, each making some parts but not a sufficient variety of production to meet the growing needs in this field.

It becomes essential to form mergers to manufacture a unit that meets the demands of the present situation. For instance some of the mergers are essential for the national defense because it is impossible to produce economically and to meet defense requirements. Small production can be very uneconomical and can add to the cost of the national defense.

This conflict between the law and the urgent needs of specific production has to be adjusted, but the place to make the adjustments is in Congress. The Executive official needs to enforce the law; if the people dislike the law, they should put pressure upon Congress to change it. Usually the people want the law to stand but oppose enforcement if it affects them.

It seems to me that Robert F. Kennedy has offered business a distinct leadership in this connection-a leadership which should be accepted with good-will. This does not mean that there will not be differences of view on this subject or that certain businesses will not require special consideration.

But it seems at the moment that the Attorney General is approaching the problem rationally and that a combination of Attorney General Kennedy, Secretary of Labor Goldberg and Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Ribicoff can form a team that can work for the preservation of the capitalist system under the prevailing dire conditions. (Copyright, 1961, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Molotov Voluntarily Returned To Moscow To Face Party Blackball

WASHINGTON - It may take some time for the entire story of Vyacheslav M. Molotov and his dramatic return to Moscow to leak to the outside world. He did not have to return. No Russian security guards accompanied him on the train. He and his wife were alone. And any number of Western capitals would have been delighted to give him refuge even including Washington.

Yet the man who for years carried out Soviet foreign policy under Stalin went home to face certain expulsion from the Communist Party.

The story that the West needs to know more than anything else -a story which could change the course of history-is whether this rift inside the Communist world of Molotov - the inevitability of war-mean that a friendlier Khrushchev wants friendlier relations with the West? Does he have more reason to fear the Red Chinese in the long run than the LIQUID CHEER-Traditionally. Christmas cheer - in the form of liquid refreshment-has been one of the emoluments of high public office in Washington and elsewhere around the country. But, alas, those days are gone for Post Office Departments, at least. Assistant Postmaster General

Without once referring to liquor, Murphy wrote that while the "long-standing custom of Christmas gift-giving to some (Post Office Department) employes" was appreciated, it might be "misunderstood by others."

Post Office employes have been advised of the prohibition on accepting Christmas gifts which might "obligate or compromise" the department. The ban applies throughout the United States, Murphy said, and emphasizes it includes gifts from "contractors and others who do business with the department.

2-That East German police used tear gas and water hoses to back up the division of Berlin created by the Wall.

Passive Surrender Is An Escape Mechanism

The mind plays strange tricks and people are likely to behave in strange ways during catastrophes and emotional crises. The ordinary faint, so common a generation or two ago, was a perfect escape mechanism. Fright, for example, produced a series of nervous and vascular reactions that caused loss of consciousness, withdrawal from reality and complete passive surrender to fate.

This type of reaction is less menacing that the psychological death of primitive people. In such instances, one person was able to put a magic curse or spell on those who violated a taboo. The victim was told he was going to die and often did.

Some years later, when the 'new look" was being adopted in Moscow, Molotov came to the USA, picked up a Texas cowboy hat, and wore it down the Chicago lake front. He was trying hard to be pleasant. It wasn't in him.

Khrushchev told me last summer about Molotov's demand that Russia continue its military occupation of Austria and its military base in Finland. Also how Molotov wanted to continue Stalin's economic restrictions over the satellites, and how he, Khrushchev, removed all this. Here, history supports him. Red Army troops have been withdrawn from all the satellites except Hungary, economic restrictions have been removed, Poland has been given such relative freedom under Khrushchev that it's unrecognizable from Stalin's day.

Stalin and Molotov would never have permitted Poland to get wheat from the USA. They forbade every satellite from participating in the Marshall Plan. No citizens of the satellites could travel abroad. The Iron Curtain had no loopholes. Now Polish musicians and dancers, Czech orchestras, other cultural missions and businessmen freely visit the United States.

This is the Khrushchev policy of coexistence as compared with the Molotov policy of the inevitability of war which he repeated only a few days before the recent party congress. He expressed his belief that "without serious conflict, without war, advance toward Communism is impossible" in the course of throwing harpoons into Khrushchev's 20-year plan for improving Russian living standards. He has always argued that these should be made secondary to Communist doctrine, and this was another reason why he got

An Insoluble Problem - Part One

She talked a little more. Louis listened. He was a big kid for 16. The puffed pompadour made him look bigger. She wasn't getting to him. The talk was a failure. She knew it. Louis knew it. She was preaching. Preaching is not an answer. Nothing is an answer.

Carmen asked the kid to go to the hospital. He smiled politely and said he would think about it. She left him at Junkie's Corner-Henry Street and Montgomeryon the lower East Side of New York. Carmen knew he wouldn't go. She dug her hands deep into her windbreaker and walked west, past the pushcarts, the gabbling women with their kerchiefs tight over their ears, the holy Jews with the beards, the Puerto Rican children running home from school, and the Chinese men who stood in doorways looking at her and beckoning with their fingers.

She saw none of them. Her little feet lifted for each curb at the right time, but she wasn't aware that she had crossed a street. She is short and dark, a girl in her early twenties with big black eyes which have peered inside hell. Carmen is a narcotics addict.

She was cold by the time she reached the Educational Alliance on East Broadway. She pushed through the big doors and went downstairs to the gymnasium and on past the pool tables, swapping absent-minded pleasantries with The Unreachables.

Carmen had an appointment with me. We talked about her, and about Louis, and about the 1,100 addicts who are jammed into the area of the 5th precinct. Carmen works among the teenage junkies, the boys and girls with schoolbooks under their arms and skin punctures on them. The United States Public Health Service estimates that there are 60,000 addicts in America and that 20,000 of them are in New York. Carmen smiles at these figures. "Listen," she said, "for every one they know about, there are two others they don't know about.' She tapped her chest. "Did they know about me? No. Not until I was ready to try to kick it.' Last May, there was a shortage of heroin. The supply dried up overnight. Nothing came in from Lebanon, Egypt, China or Mexico. Only New York's lower East Side had it. The pushers stood in hallways peddling the little white powders at double the price-$10 -for a fix. The poor addicts stood around, laughing and pointing, as big Cadillacs drove down from Westchester and Connecticut, desperate for "horse." The rich knew that the East Side would have some left.

When the supply started anew, three young addicts died of overdoses because the pushers forgot to cut the stuff. The youngsters weren't accustomed to pure heroin. The young ones hide their needles and materials - called "the works" - in cellars, around schoolyards, in lockers, and in room closets. These consist of an eye dropper with a jagged tip, a baby's nipple, and a portable appartus for cooking the heroin. The children can't buy a hypodermic, so they scratch a vein until it bleeds. The nipple is squeezed and the heroin is forced into the bloodstream. SRC Salt Crews Are Called Out

Drifting fog and slippery spots from the second snowfall of the season last night prompted Maryland State Police to warn motorists to drive with extreme caution over mountain highways in Western Maryland.

The LaVale barracks said snow tires were recommended but there was no need for chains if caution was used.

Mountain highways were reported slippery in spots, although the snow was melting as soon as it fell in lower spots of the area. Driving both east and west of Cumberland was complicated by the presence of fog. SRC Crews Out

The snow began falling about 4 p. m. in the Cumberland, Bedford, Pa., Romney, W. Va. area but the District 6 office of the State Roads Commission said there was no accumulation.

An official for the SRC reported, however, that a few work crews were sent out to salt some slippery spots west of Frostburg on U. S. 40 and in Garrett County.

The Weather Bureau predicted that snow may accumulate several inches during the night on highways at higher elevations in the mountains. It said that the snow would end Monday but that there mountains. It said that the snow would be a chance of snow flurries in the mountains Tuesday.
